Call 449 if you fail to get the Kentuckian promptly. And if you have a news item, phone it to the same number.

This morning news is alarming. The facts cannot be concealed. The British are in danger of defeat in a decisive battle in the world's history, that has centered on the Mesines ridge, the national barrier protecting the coast of France. Field Marshal Haig has sounded a note of alarm. The fate of the world may be decided on this, the thirteenth of the month. But there are Americans on the way!

The Courier-Journal failed to come yesterday, but the Kentuckian came out on time and Hopkinsville got the news as usual.

If you lend your money to the Government, you may be quite sure that it is going to be used for some national purpose—to prosecute the war successfully, to care for, equip, arm, and supply our soldiers in France, to be used by our Navy in ridding the seas of the murderous U-boats.

An Iowa traveling man became so incensed at German atrocities as depicted at a motion picture show that he drew his revolver and fired two shots at a picture of the Kaiser. You can hurt him worse than that by buying a Liberty Bond.—Cynthia Democrat.

American troops in the Toul sector of France drove back in disorder Wednesday the heaviest German attack yet made on the American position. The Germans could not get through the wire entanglements and the enemy suffered numerous casualties from the violent artillery bombardment.

The button which will be given to every subscriber to a Liberty Loan Bond of the third issue, whether of a $50 bond or a $10,000 one, will have a border of brilliant red, and a blue field with a Liberty bell, and the words "Third Liberty Loan" in white. Sixteen million of these buttons are now ready for delivery and will be given out when the subscriptions are made.

CITIZEN OF FAIRVIEW DIES

JOHN FRANKLIN BARNETT HAD BEEN ILL FOR SEVERAL WEEKS.

On Thursday afternoon at forty minutes past three o'clock John Franklin Barnett peacefully passed away at his home in Fairview. He was sixty-three years and one month of age at the time of his death and was one of Fairview's oldest and most revered citizens. He was a most excellent neighbor and friend and his character above reproach.

Mr. Barnett was born in Todd county in 1855, the son of Garner Barnett. He was reared on the farm and followed the business of farming his life.

Many years ago Mr. Barnett suffered the loss of his good wife but married again. He is survived by two children, Mrs. A. B. Wilkins, Elkton, and Herschel G. Barnett, merchant of Fairview. On Feb. 4 became ill of pneumonia and this developed into such a serious illness for days his life was despaired of. For awhile recently his condition thought improved but suddenly a turn this week for the worse. Immediate cause of dissolution was an uncured, or consumption of the bowels.

Funeral services were conducted at the Fairview Presbyterian church, which deceased was a member, today at 2 p. m. by Rev. Charles Ward of Hopkinsville. Interment in Goshen burying ground.

Deceased was a cousin of John A. Barnett and Mr. N. Barnett of Hopkinsville.

OVER MILLION MORE POUNDS

Of Tobacco Added To Sales Since Last Report April 4th.

$22.50 IS HIGH MARK Lower Average Due To Much Damaged Weed And Poor Handling

The loose floor tobacco sales for the past week were accelerated considerably by the nice rains which softened the weed and put it in condition to be handled. However, the cold spell the past few days cut down deliveries considerably from what they were prior to the northerner.

The average the past week fell 35c below the previous week. This was due to two causes. First, there was a preponderance of tobacco that had been bulked down while too high in order and much of it had molded. Second, there were many who had ordered their tobacco for handling by sprinkling it, and much of it to the damaging point. To illustrate this one buyer said one farmer brought in his crop that to all appearances had been sprinkled with at least a barrel of water and he was certain that the price was $2.00 lower than it should have been.

Inspector Cornette reports the week as follows: Week ending April 11, 1918.

LOOSE FLOORS.

CUMMINS GROWS VICIOUS

AND MAKES A PERSONAL ATTACK ON PRESIDENT WILSON TO THE SENATE.

(By International News Service.) Washington, April 12.—Criticism of the President's method of exercising his war powers was featured in today's debate in the Senate on the Overman bill. Senator Cummins, of Iowa, in the course of long speech attacking the measure, declared that there had been "no guidance to bring the heads of departments together." He charged the President with having failed to coordinate the duties of different departments, under power already given him. It will probably be several days before a vote is reached on the bill.

ALL READY FOR DRIVE

DETAILS OF LIBERTY LOAN DRIVE PERFECTED AT LUNCHEON LAST NIGHT.

Seventy-five or one hundred men and women met around tables last evening at the Elks Club and enjoyed a most delightful luncheon. There were as many women as men and they seated themselves at the tables in alternate chairs and no man was permitted to be seated beside his wife if she were present.

But it was not to enjoy the feast alone that they came. The gathering together was to organize the several teams of salesmen and saleswomen to go out Monday next and get subscriptions for Liberty Bonds. It is hoped that nobody will have to sell Liberty Bonds but simply take the subscriptions. It is supposed that everybody who can will take bonds and when a person has once made up his mind that he wants a thing or has to have a thing, it is already sold and only the taking of the subscriptions remains for the salesman.

All the banks throughout the country have instructions to report to the Government at Washington all persons who are able and refuse to buy bonds and buy them in liberal amounts. The banks have also received instructions that no further public press announcements will be made of the amounts of bonds sold. All press announcements hereafter of amounts of bonds any community, county or district has subscribed will be given out from Washington as the official deem proper.

THOUSANDS OF CHILDREN TAKE PART

In Monster Parade Yesterday Through Streets Of Hopkinsville

TABERNACLE EXERCISES

Schools From Other Towns Joins In Liberty Loan March

What was the biggest children's parade ever seen in Hopkinsville took place yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock when all the children of the white schools of the city were joined by large numbers from Gracey, Lafayette, Pembroke, Newstead, Howell, Crofton, etc. Meeting in Virginia Park and forming in parade with all the teachers of the children acting as generals, they moved west down Ninth street to Main and north on Main to Seventh to the Tabernacle. Something like two thousand were marched between walls of human faces lining both sides of the streets. It was indeed an inspiring scene.

At the Tabernacle many hundreds stood or were compelled to turn away for lack of standing room.

Prof. G. C. Koffman presided and Rev. A. S. Anderson delivered the opening prayer; after which the audience arose en masse and sang "America." Robt. River, a high school boy, delivered a great oration to the boys and girls of America. This speech appears in to-day's paper. "Keep the Home Fires Burning" was sung by Misses Gladys McCord and Virginia Smith, being assisted on the chorus by the children. "A Toast To Our Heroes" was given by 5 little boys dressed in different uniforms. The audience sang "The Star Spangled Banner," and John Dabney and Charlie Daniel read letters from the French children to the children of America.

After the close of the speeches and songs the entire body of children marched in two across the stage and each dropped a nickel in the crack of the Liberty Bell which was placed in position. The money thus raised will be used to buy a Liberty Bond for the children of France. Something over a hundred dollars was raised in this way.

Every child carried either a drum or a flag and when they all stood and waived these flags it was a most beautiful and inspiring sight. The Boy Scouts were in uniform and took an active part in the parade.

OUR SERVICE FLAG

According to unofficial advices, American Marines have landed at Vladivostok, where Japanese and British forces had already been landed in small detachments.

The coroner's jury at Collinsville, Ill., returned a verdict finding that Robt. P. Praeger, a German, met his death by lynching at the hands of a mob and recommended that Joe Riegel, Westley Beaver, Richard Duques, Jr., Wm. Brockmier and Enli Elmore be held for murder.

Admiral Bowles, in charge of the Hog Island shipyard, in a report just submitted, says the efficiency of the yard has been greatly increased within the last two months and that no time is now being wasted. He says Dwight P. Robinson, President of the board, was inefficient and had to be replaced.

It has become known that the United States exacted from the British government an acceptance of Gen. Foch and the unification of all forces opposing Germany before consent was given to brigade American soldiers with English and French fighting units. The sacrifice of British pride was greater than our own. American soldiers are thus afforded an opportunity for active service, which otherwise might not have been realized until the crucial struggle had passed. This briefly summarizes the answer of the administration to criticisms of its policy.

D. S. O. ENGINES ARE TO APPEAR WITH RED NOSES.

(By International News Service.)

San Francisco, April 12.—If you see a locomotive with a red nose, a proboscis as effulgent as a Hawaiian sunset, don't attribute it to alcoholism.

That locomotive will be wearing the D. S. O. known in France as the Distinguished Service Order, of the rails.

Conversation of fuel oil on the Southern Pacific lines is regarded as of such importance now that locomotive crews on every division are bending their energies along that line. Under orders from General Manager Scott the locomotives of each class which makes the best showing on their respective divisions in the matter of fuel oil saving are now decorated just as any other war hero might be decorated.

ENGINES INTENDED FOR RUSSIANS IN USE HERE.

In Cold Storage

By Alan Fothergill

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union)

Among the possessions acquired by Miss Verla Bliss, when she became heiress to the estate of Geoffrey Wall, her uncle, was a piece of city property she had never seen. She had been content to receive a regular, though varying income from this, leaving the details of the matter to her lawyer.

"It is some kind of a warehouse," Verla explained to a cousin, "and the lawyer has told me it is in an out-of-the-way locality among the river docks, and valuable only because it is adapted to the uses to which it is devoted. I have never seen it. Mr. Crompton has advised me to do so, for there may be an opportunity to sell or trade it. I am to go to the city Tuesday, to look it over for the first time."

Verla was greatly pleased at the attention and interest bestowed upon her, when she reached the office of her lawyer that Tuesday morning. The old attorney, Mr. Crompton, was most fatherly, and he tried to make Verla understand the condition of affairs without veiling that equable but inexperienced mind of hers.

"Here is the problem, Miss Bliss," he stated: "The property, as such, is shut out from all business frontage, with only a narrow courtway leading to it over a maze of railroad tracks. For twenty years the old building, a steel-sheathed structure, has been used as a warehouse and elevator. Your uncle had regular clients among the canal boat and lake steamer men, and did something in the coal-storage line for a time. Since he died we have had a man named Delbridge in charge. I discharged this man last week, when I received absolute information that he was holding back a part of the income charges. We will have to find some honest and trustworthy person to take his place, go over the records, and if we learn that the peculations have been of any magnitude and kept up for years, we shall bring this Delbridge to time."

"And what can poor, inexperienced me do in such a tangle?" inquired Verla in pretty dismay.

"You must decide what you want done," replied Mr. Crompton. "I have thought it best to have you visit the property, and then determine whether you wish the business continued under a new manager, or sold out, with the returns from the real estate and the money invested otherwise. Mr. Dare," called out the lawyer, and his assistant entered the room.

"Our Mr. Dare will take you over the property, Miss Bliss," spoke Mr. Crompton, and Verla scanned closely the clear-eyed, pleasant-faced young man who acknowledged the informal introduction with a courteous bow. They were chatting like real friends before they had covered two squares.

"You can get a better idea of the location and environment of the property on foot," explained Elston Dare.

"We seem to be penetrating a rather nondescript neighborhood," suggested his fair companion. She kept close to her guide, for the narrow thoroughfares were congested with trucks and carts, and the sidewalks almost covered with boxes, bales and hoppers. Once Miss Blair, glancing back, narrowly scrutinized a man who lost himself promptly as he noticed that he was observed. Dare detected a slight quiver of the dainty gloved hand, holding his arm.

"What was it?" he inquired solicitously.

"A man I have noticed before," replied Miss Bliss. "I am sure he is and another followed me when I left the depot."

"You do not now see the one you just discovered?"

"No, he has disappeared."

They reached the grim, almost windowless structure on the riverbank, and interested in her new surroundings, Verla forgot her previous nervous fears. Dare had a key to the great padlocked door. He turned on the electric light. It illuminated a dark spiral stairway.

"All the rest of the building, except the little office at the top, has been used for storage," he explained.

"How chilly and damp it is," murmured Miss Bliss, and she was quite out of breath when they reached a little pen of a place holding a desk and a safe. Dare bestowed his charge in a chair and began to describe the business carried on.

"Just now all the elevator holds is some stored grain," he told her. "My plan would be, if you decide to continue the business, to resume the cold-storage department and utilize the lower floor of the elevator for short-time merchandise storage. I am instructed to bring the books back to the office. We shall go over them thoroughly and see how far the discharged Delbridge has manipulated them."

Dare had barely unlocked the safe when the door was burst open. Three men entered the room.

"These two!" cried Verla, paling, and arising to her feet in consternation. "They are the men who followed me from the depot."

The third Dare at once recognized as Delbridge, the discharged manager.

At a signal from the latter his associate seized Dare by the arm and backed him to the wall. Delbridge picked up the books Dare had dropped when assailed.

"Well see to it that these telltale documents don't see the light again," he chuckled. Then he turned upon the frightened Verla. "We mean business," he said coolly, "but you're not going to be harmed. Your friends have tried to blacken my reputation and you've got to pay for it."

"What do you mean?" breathed Verla in a tremulous tone.

"I mean that I'm going to have these books printed and you'll answer me for every line," Delbridge responded the next moment. "You have plenty of money, don't you? You'll give me an order or a check for ten thousand dollars. I'll send one of my men to get it cashed. When he comes back I'll be here."

"I'll do it," asserted Verla readily, "but I must consult Mr. Dare!"

The latter was struggling to release himself and his two captors were treating him roughly.

"Do not give these scoundrels a cent, Miss Bliss!" shouted Dare, and made a desperate effort to break away from them.

"Here!" cried Delbridge, sliding back a door at one side of the little room. "Give him the benefit of solitude and darkness till we finish our negotiations with the young lady."

Verla screamed in outright terror as the two men gave Dare a fling into dark space and Delbridge drew close the door again. Dare felt himself falling. He swung out both hands. One grazed a chain, there was a sharp click. The chain slipped through his fingers and he went downward several feet and landed on a mass resembling a bank of shifting sand.

In a flash he guessed where he was—in one of those sealed compartments where grain was stored. The close, musty air was stifling. He had sunk up to the knees in the mass of oats. Like a man in quicksand his body began to sink deeper and deeper. He tried to anchor himself steadily. The feat could not be accomplished. Then he noted with a thrill of concern that the mass was moving and that he was moving with it.

The grain was going down the discharge chute, he decided.

The chain he had grazed must be the one controlling the door to the chute down which ordinarily grain was loaded into the holds of boats taking to a cargo. Twice the mass nearly engulfed him. With a prodigious effort Dare drew his feet out of the gyrating mass and managed to lay flat on his back. At the rate of hundreds of bushels a minute the grain was pouring into the mouth of the chute. He was tossed, rolled, engulfed, cast upwards like a feather amid tumbling, rushing sea drift. Gradually the vortex current lowered, he aimed to strike the side of the great bin with his feet, missed, and was whirled into the confined space of the glass-smooth sides of the chute.

Splash! He had reached the end of the chute to fall not into the hold of some boat, but squarely into the river. He came up to find himself in the midst of a flood of thousands of bushels of floating grain.

"Aho, there!" rang out a boisterous tone from the dock, and a rope was flung him by one of a throng wondering at the strange waste of precious grain. Dare was pulled up to the wharf platform, half bludgeoned, choking, well-nigh collapsing.

"Quick!" he gasped—"some one hurry for the police!"

"What's up?" challenged his rescuer. "Some scoundrels—they tried to kill me. They are holding a young lady captive up in the elevator office."

Contrary to their designs, the scheming Delbridge and his confederates were led out of the building handcuffed by the emissaries of the law. Miss Bliss clung to Dare's arm in feverish, almost hysterical agitation.

She shuddered as Dare recited his uncanny experience. She was solicitous and kindly, more than friendly, as they proceeded back to the lawyer's office. Wise, observant Samuel Crompton smiled quietly to himself as he heard what had happened.

"My client will soon have a husband to look after her affairs," he soliloquized. And he was right.

Mistletoe-Kiss Custom.

One of the old mistletoe beliefs was that originally the plant had itself been a tree, and that it was from that tree that the holy cross was made. The mistletoe became popular with the ancients of Europe, states a writer, because it was believed to have the power of keeping away evil spirits. That was the reason why men and women hung it in their homes. And because so many people hung it in their homes to keep away evil spirits it came to stand as a symbol of hospitality. Many efforts have been made to trace the origin of the connection of mistletoe with kissing, but the many explanations resulting from those researches are far from being clear and convincing. The mistletoe-kiss custom is very old among the peoples of northern Europe.

Maant Same to Her.

The little fairy of a home had heard someone say that the man who did the plastering didn't use enough elbow grease, and had asked what it meant, and was told that he did not bear down hard enough. The meaning seemed to lodge in her mind more forcibly than the word itself. A few days later her mother was scrubbing the porch and she came out with her little broom, and after scrubbing vigorously for a few minutes she leaned over on her broom, drew a long breath, and said: "It takes lots of shoulder water to get this porch clean, don't it?"

GLAD TO TESTIFY

Says Watoga Lady, "As To What Cardui Has Done For Me, So As To Help Others."

Watoga, W. Va.—Mrs. S. W. Gladwell, of this town, says: "When about 15 years of age, I suffered greatly. Sometimes would go a month or two, and I had terrible headache, backache, and I was down pains, and I was just not able to do anything. Then I got Cardui. I took two weeks, and I was so well, and my health was restored. I bought a bottle of Cardui, and I began to improve. I took the first bottle, and I felt better. I took three more, and I was well and strong, and I love it all to this day. I am married now and have five children. I have never had to have a doctor for any trouble, and just resort to Cardui. I need a tonic. I am glad to testify to what it has done for me, so as to help others."

If you are nervous or weak, have headaches, backaches, or any of the other ailments so common to women, why not give Cardui a trial? Recommended by many physicians. Course, over 40 years. Begin taking Cardui today. It may be the very medicine you need.

ORCHARD TOPICS

GRADING FRUIT FOR MARKET
Producer Who Has Neglected to Spray Will Learn Its Value When He Attempts to Grade.

If the farmer desires to have his apples or other fruit compete successfully with that bought by the retailer on the general market, he must grade it carefully. When good, sound, well-graded fruit is brought to the stores by the farmer, some grocers are known to pay a good price for it and even to feature it as being home-grown.

The producer who has neglected to spray will learn a lesson on the value of spraying when he attempts to grade. He will find that the percentage of strictly high-grade specimens in his crop is very low. Given the unsprayed crop may be helped considerably by grading out those fruits which are bruised, rotted or have been badly damaged by insects or diseases. One or two rotten apples may prevent the sale of an entire basket.

Well graded fruit of the highest quality should be sound, well colored, free from insect or disease injury and neither blemished or bruised. The best grades are also uniform in size and color. When well graded, home-grown fruit appears on the market it is always in great demand. The grower who markets a high-class product of this kind gets a good price and is seldom caught with a surplus on hand.

HEAT FOR SMALL ORCHARDS

Expense of Both Installation and Operation Are Much Greater Than on Large Plantation.

The practicability of heating small orchards has often been questioned. It is comparatively much harder to heat a small orchard than a large one, and more pots are necessary to maintain the required temperature. For this reason the expense of both installation and operation are much greater on a small orchard than on a large one.

On the other hand, the small orchardist need employ no labor. Likewise, he uses oil in small quantities only, and has no expense for storage.

The cost of installing a heating system for a 10-acre orchard under mid-western conditions has been estimated at from $225 to $400, varying with local conditions. This includes heaters, tank wagon, torches, thermometers and a storage tank. The cost of labor and fuel should not exceed $10 to $20 an acre annually.

In regions where frosts are of frequent occurrence this small cost is good insurance, for, if well cared for, any orchard will produce a fruit crop worth from $100 to $400 an acre.

SUITABLE SOIL FOR GRAPES

Well-Drained Land of Good Fertility Is Required—Few Farms Where Crop Cannot Be Grown.

Grapes require a well-drained soil of good fertility. A light sandy loam, a clay loam or a gravelly loam where the seasons are anything like normal may be exposed to produce grapes. Grapes are grown on soils of other characteristics and doubtless there are very few farms where the rainfall is sufficient and where draining is ample that some varieties of grapes could not be grown.

DAMAGE FROM MICE AVOIDED

Remove All Loose, Trashy Material From Neighborhood of Base of the Tree Trunk.

Damage from mice should be avoided by the removal of all loose, trashy material from the neighborhood of the base of the tree trunk. If the ground has been fall plowed, the under furrow slice furnishes good nesting places for mice and the nearby trees are likely to suffer, but if the ground near the tree is clean and well compacted, little damage will be done by these rodents.

PEACE LEAGUE WOMEN'S PLAN

Delaware Long Acted as Arbiters Until Deposed by the Militaristic Iroquois Five Nations.

The American Indians did not know any way to make peace effective except by appeal to their women. To ask for peace was thought to be unworthy of a male that unless women intervened there was nothing for it but to fight on to extinction. The Five Nations established their peace woman in a fort near Niagara river in a long house divided in the middle by a curtain. She would receive the contending parties each unknown to the other, and after she heard their cases, would draw back the curtain and give her decision.

The idea of woman as the proper arbitrator prevailed in the famous international agreement between the Iroquois and the Leni-Lenape. At this time the courteous and peace-loving Delawares were induced to become arbiters by being made women. This role of international peace-maker was carried out by the Delawares for long with dignity and success. But finally the pacific Delawares did something which was displeasing to the militaristic Five Nations of the Iroquois. Whereupon the Five Nations sent them word that the Delawares had lost their right to independent action. And so ended the first international peace league.—Mary Austin, in World Outlook.

"The father took the jug and began to drink. As he gulped the tea down slowly, the thirsty boy said:

"The father put down the jug in astonishment.

"Why, Tam," he said, "you're talkin'! Why didn't ye never speak afore?"

"Naught for to say," said Tam."

YOUNG AMERICA

RINGING APPEAL TO BOYS AND GIRLS MADE BY ROBERT RIVES IN THE CHILDREN'S MEETING YESTERDAY.

Boys and girls of America, you are the hope of the world! This is not an empty phrase. What remains of the youth of Europe after the war will be crippled and scarred in body or spirit, and those who are children to-day will have to give all their energies to the rebuilding of shattered cities and the reconstruction of stable government. There will be no time for men to struggle long and patiently in art or science or literature. There will be too much common drudgery that will have to be done day by day, and the men of vision will be few. Girls and boys of America you are the hope of the world! We have a rich country. We have not been touched by war, not really touched by it. Not touched as Belgium, France and England have been touched, cutched, throttled, hung down by it. You who are ten, twelve, fourteen, fifteen, sixteen now will probably not be closely touched by it at all. Your brother may go to fight for freedom on the sea or in France, but you, Bill and Jack and George and Mary and Susan and Jane will stay at home and do—What? That is the great question. At bottom, it's the greatest question confronting this dear country of ours. At bottom it's greater than any question of guns or money or potatoes or submarines or party politics—the question in the nation's crisis is: What are you girls and boys of America going to do?

You are the hope of the world. This is not empty rhetoric. This is hard fact. But, you say there are boys and girls in other countries scarcely touched by the war; in India, for instance, in Japan, in China, millions of them, there are girls and boys in Norway and Sweden and Spain and Holland and South America. Why, you say, are we the world's hope? Why must we carry that responsibility? We'd rather not, you say.

You can not evade it, Young America. The stars are conspiring against you. Destiny, which made your country rich and gave her great leaders in time of need, and helped her to build a magnificent republic out of gunpowder and many creeds. Destiny that brought you to the light under the Eagle and the stars and stripes. Destiny, that chose America to be the greatest testing-ground of democracy in the world. Destiny, fortune, God laid on you the privilege and the responsibility of being the hope of a world in tears. You can carry the responsibility and be glorious. You can throw it off, and be damned; but you can not ignore it.

You are the hope of the world! And are you, white your country stripes for battle and your brothers prepare themselves to fight "for what America has always fought for—Liberty"—are you going on dancing and spinning on your ear and loafing at street corners and reading the sporting page and doffing up your figures and your face? Or are you going to make up suddenly to the emptiness and the ugliness of all this, and throw it aside, crying, "By crickets, there are big things in this world, and by all that's clean in me and true in me and brave in me am concerned, the hope of the world shall be fulfilled. Young American, What Are You Going to Do?

American in me, I'm going out there and giving my heart and soul to them."

GERMANS BRUTAL TO PRISONERS.

In an article about German prison camps in the March Farm and Fire-side, a writer says:

"The Germans are frequently very brutal to the prisoners. A sentry uses his bayonet first and inquires afterward. He will never be punished for anything that he does to prisoners."

"For example, a party of English had been sent from Celle to work in a salt mine. This was all right, but it was very hot down the mine—so hot that the boys removed their shirts. The fine salt dropped from the roof upon their bare backs, causing large open sores. At last they were sent to Celle for medical attention. They were kept there for four days. The doctor couldn't or wouldn't do anything for them, and they were sent back."

"Upon arrival at the mine the boys refused to go down. So the German sentries charged this defenseless crowd with fixed bayonets. One of their number was killed, and the rest were forced to go down the mine again. These fellows I knew personally, and they came into Celle while I was there."

EVERY AMERICAN'S DUTY.

To work, economize and lend money to the Government is the duty of every American.

Hundreds of thousands of our men have been called to arms and taken away from the products of forces of the country.

Hundreds of thousands of others have been diverted from producing things used in peace to producing things used in war.

In the face of this lessened productive force and production a great and unusual drain upon our resources is made by our Army and Navy and our allies.

Work and speed-up production to make up for the lessened production; economize in consumption to lessen as much as possible the drain upon our resources; lend your money to your Government to prosecute this war successfully and make our soldiers powerful, effective, and victorious.

Every American can do an individual service to his country by working, saving, and buying Liberty Bonds.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

(By Ben King Harrod.)

In the fall of 1904 under the supervision of Miss Mills, then principal of the High School, the Henry Clay debating society was organized for the boys. The purpose of this society was to perfect the boys in the art of speaking. Joe McCarroll was elected first president of his organization. A regular debate was held each week and each meeting was conducted under strict parliamentary rule.

In the spring of 1905 a great encouragement came to the boys in the form of a meet held at Marion. As a result of this meeting the principals of the High Schools perfected the organization for an annual oratorical contest. The first of these meetings known as the Western Kentucky Oratorical Contest was held in Hopkinsville, and Caldwell Feland represented the High School. The annual contest gave a wonderful impetus to the work the boys were doing in the literary society and each year it was the light of every boy's ambition to represent his school in the contest. There were always many competitors for the honor and it was necessary to hold a preliminary to determine the representative. Harry Cate, Oglesby Soyars, Henry Abbott and Edward Moseley were some of the representatives who won honor for themselves and glory for their school in the Western State Contest.

Besides furnishing a speaker for the oratorical contest, an annual debate was always held. In these debates the boys never failed to uphold the lofty ideal and principles of that great Kentucky statesman, Henry Clay.

When the societies were first organized there were only one hundred students and when the school roll grew to three hundred it became necessary to have two organizations. In 1914 the boys of each class were equally divided into the Ciceronian and Delphian societies. Under this system every boy was compelled to be a member and each Friday one lesson period was omitted for the weekly program. At length it was discovered that the societies were handicapped by having Seniors and Freshmen work together and two years later under the direction of Prof. Koffman everything was reorganized. Under the present organization the Juniors and Seniors compose one society known as the Henry Clay and the Freshmen and Sophomores form the Jeffersonian.

The work is held after school and is not compulsory but a credit toward graduation is given for a four year course. Under this arrangement the societies are composed of only the best material from each of the classes and excellent work has been done, by both organizations, all of the year. The meetings are held on Monday afternoons and there is always a good program. At the roll call each member responds with a quotation from some standard author and the unexcused absentees are fined. Recently a special time for rigid parliamentary practice has been provided for, which is always enjoyed by the boys and often forms the most interesting part of the work. Heated discussions are held to impeach officers or to expel members, on account of insanity or sometimes on the charge of being a Pro-German. All of the practice is conducted in a friendly manner and the members are greatly benefited by it. The Henry Clay Society held a mock trial in the chapel in January and members from both of the organizations hope to participate in a declamatory contest during commencement week. The societies are assuredly doing a wonderful work and are developing orators who shall some day sway the destiny of nations by their eloquence.

A Manual Arts War Savings Society was organized during the week among the boys taking manual training and every boy signed the pledge. The object of the society is to help the government by buying Thrift Stamps and also encourage the spirit of saving among the boys. Every member agreed to abstain from indulging in unnecessary luxuries such as going to the picture shows daily and from constantly spending money at the drug stores. The money saved in this way is to be turned into Thrift Stamps. A similar organization also exists among the girls of the domestic economy department.

On Friday morning the High School was honored by the distinguished presence of James Breathitt, III. "Jimmy" delivered a magnificent address on "The Glory of Living in the Twentieth Century," and then demonstrated his ability to turn the hand spring. His performance was enjoyed and appreciated by all of the students and they hope he will come again soon.

The school was dismissed at 10 o'clock Friday to take part in the schools' parade.

HICKS DENIED VENUE CHARGE

A dispatch from Dixon says Heber Hicks will have his trial there during the August term of the Webster circuit court on the charge of killing Mrs. Joy Sparks of Clay, Ky.

The motion of Hicks for a change of venue from Webster county was argued before Judge Dorsey and denied. Hicks will not be returned to the jail at Henderson, where he has been kept most of the time since his arrest, but will be held in jail in Dixon where he was returned last week and there has been no talk of trouble.

Attorneys for Hicks filed eight affidavits to the effect that he could not have a fair and impartial trial in Webster county due to local prejudice and influence. To offset this the state introduced about eighteen witnesses, among them members of the present jury, who swore Hicks would be given a fair trial and that the feeling against him, which caused his removal to Henderson for safekeeping, has passed away.

"FERRELL'S BOY"

Mr. H. F. Robertson, formerly of Trigg county, who went to Wichita Falls, Texas, about fifteen years ago, and was elected city tax collector within a year or two after reaching that place, was again elected to the position on April second, and the Daily Times of that city says he had no opposition for the position. Harry has held the position continuously since his first election. He was a pupil of Ferrell's High School in this city when a boy.

CONTROL PEACH LEAF CURL

Caused by Fungous Disease Which Produces Reddish Colored Distortion—Spray in Winter.

The curling of the leaves of peach trees is often caused by a fungous disease called leaf curl. This fungus attacks the tissue of the leaf, producing a reddish colored distortion and distorts the leaf as a star-shaped organ. Because of the loss of the foliage the tree is depleted in vitality and the setting of buds for next year's crop greatly reduced.

The fungus becomes active very early in spring, even before the middle of March when the spring green early and warm. It attacks the swelling bud and gets into the tissues before the leaf is unfolded. Therefore spraying after the disease is noticed is practically of no value because the spray cannot get at the pores of the fungus. Spraying must be done when these spots are dormant or in their winter stage. Therefore the spraying should be done before the middle of March in ordinary seasons or earlier in seasons which are advanced.

There are a number of fungicides which will keep this trouble in check. The standard remedy used to be copper sulphate at the strength of two pounds to 50 gallons of water. This proved very efficient, but it was difficult to tell whether all parts of the tree were covered or not. Bordeaux mixture, made of four pounds of copper sulphate and five pounds of lime, also does good work and is better than copper sulphate because it leaves a mark by which one can tell whether the entire tree has been covered.

ORDER FRUIT TREES EARLY

Nurserymen Always Give Such Customers Best Stock They Have—Better Service Assured.

Much will be gained by making out the order for fruit trees and sending it in early. Nurserymen always appreciate early orders and give such customers the best stock they have to offer. They then have plenty of time to enter such orders and one may depend upon better service than when the order is sent in late when there is a rush.

Trees are not dug till they become dormant after the first frost. Digging and labeling trees and getting ready to pack and ship make the nurseryman a very busy man. He will take care of your order any time, but he is in a better position to serve you if you send the order early. Besides, late in the season nurserymen are likely to sell out of some standard varieties and not be able to fill orders sent in very late. But early orders have the preference.

ANNUAL SPRAYING FOR SCALE

Use of Combined Contact Insecticide Is Preferred—Apply During Dormant Season.

Since annual spraying for scale is necessary the use of a combined contact insecticide is preferred. The best among these are lime-sulphur and scalecide, a miscible oil. Spraying at any time during the dormant season will give results for both scale and the leaf curl, but it is conceded that early spring is best for both purposes. It is very essential to spray thoroughly to get good results as any bud left uncovered will be likely to develop leaf curl if the season is at all favorable to the development of the fungi.

PREVENT SPREAD OF BLIGHT

Infected Branches Must Be Carefully Destroyed and Instruments Should Be Sterilized.

Blight in fruit trees can only be cured by cutting out all infected branches. These must be carefully destroyed to prevent further spread. Furthermore, the instruments should be sterilized after each cut in a solution of corrosive sublimate in water, 1 to 1,000, as an additional precaution against infection. Paint cuts with white lead and lye-soil oil to protect against decay.

Plan Your War Garden Now, Save Time and Money.

HELP INCREASE OUR EXPORT FOOD STOCKS

N CITY and country more war gardens are needed this year than ever before. Patriotism prompted 2,000,000 Americans to plant gardens last year, according to estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture. Transportation facilities of the nation will be strained this year hauling munitions of war and foods for the Allies. The surplus food created by home gardens will help in the railroad problem. And the nation will eat less of the goods we must export—wheat, meat, fats and sugar. Every boy and girl that helps with the garden is helping win the war. Leaders of instruction in garden making may be secured from the Department of Agriculture at Washington, upon request, without charge.

WATKINS FARM NEAR GRACEY

PURCHASED BY L. B. MORGAN AT LONG PRICE AND IMMEDIATE POSSESSION GIVEN.

One of the finest farms in West Christian changed hands yesterday near Gracey. The real estate firm of Radford & Johnson engineered the deal and L. W. Watkins sold to L. B. Morgan the fine tract known as the McCarty place, containing 557 acres. The price is not made public, but the sale was one of the biggest deals of the year. Mr. Watkins gives immediate possession. This enterprising firm is making a reputation for handling big deals. The Watkins farm is about eight miles west of town and is one of the best in that part of the county. It is near Gracey, convenient to churches, schools and two railroads and a turnpike. Mr. Watkins has not announced his plans for the future, but he may come to Hopkinsville to live.

DRAFTED MAN'S DOUBLE TRAGEDY

SLAYS HIS YOUNG WIFE AND THEN KILLS HIMSELF AT GOLDEN POND.

The Cadiz Record gives an account of a tragedy that occurred near Golden Pond Wednesday. Frank Compton, a farmer, shot and killed his wife and himself Wednesday. Compton was a registrant who had been married only about five months. He had tried to get his wife to agree to go to some place to board while he was away in the army, stating that he would pay her board. She declined, stating that she preferred to remain with her mother. Wednesday morning Compton left home and in a little while returned with a double barrel shot gun, and as he approached the house began firing at his wife through an open door. Several shots were fired and the wife fell, mortally wounded. He then turned the gun upon himself and blew the top of his head off. The wife lived for several hours before she died.

FIRST OFFICER KILLED

LIEUT THOMAS OF CALIFORNIA COMMANDER OF ARMED GUARD ON STEAMSHIP.

The first United States naval officer lost in the war with Germany was Lieut. Clarence C. Thomas of California, commander of the armed guard on the steamship Vacuum, was sunk by a German submarine on the morning of April 28, 1917. There was only a moment's warning before the torpedo struck the ship. Lieutenant Thomas and the after gun's crew manned the gun, but two minutes later the stern of the Vacuum plunged, throwing Thomas and his crew into the water. They were rescued by a ship's boat. The weather was bitterly cold, the sea very rough. Within a short time the boat capsized twice, four men being drowned. It was righted each time, but the exposure and the fight against a heavy sea was too much for the sailors. Eleven of the fourteen men, including Lieutenant Thomas, died and their bodies were swept overboard. At noon the next day another lifeboat rescued the three survivors of the eighteen that were originally in the boat. Lieutenant Thomas was a native of Grass Valley, Cal., born December 26, 1886. He entered the Naval academy in 1894, graduating in 1906. He had made an excellent record in the navy and was one of the first officers put in command of a naval gun's crew when American merchantmen were armed for protection against submarines. The four enlisted men of the gun's crew drowned were Donald Alexander, seaman, second class, of New York; Charles J. Fischer of Philadelphia, coxswain; Charles D. Luckan of Baltimore, seaman, and Frank Hazelton LaRue of Philadelphia, seaman.

MINOR FINALLY GOT "HITCHED."

Because he is a minor, Minor M. Jacobson of Indianapolis was almost deprived of the pleasure of attending his own wedding. Minor, who is eighteen and a corporal in the Forty-sixth infantry at Camp Taylor, Ky., wanted to marry Miss Bernice Craig Menach, sixteen.

Many years ago the state legislature passed a law requiring men under twenty-one to have a signed certificate of consent from a parent or legal guardian before they could be licensed to marry. Both of Jacobson's parents are dead, and he had no guardian. Judge Ewhank attached his official O. K. to the license, and made it valid.

VALUE OF CAMOUFLAGE.

In the old days our bell tents made excellent targets for heavy artillery, being visible at a distance of many miles, relates an army officer. Now all of them are painted with a special sort of distemper, and the bolder the patches, the stronger the colors, the better. Strong paintings break the contours of any object, and so not only tents, but guns, limbers, wagon covers and huts are made to look just like the patched and broken ground of camps and roadways.

TOO MUCH FOR HIM

Elephant—So your marriage with Mrs. Grizzly Bear was an unhappy one?
Mr. Stork—I should say so! No matter how hard I worked for her she did nothing but growl from morning till night.

TREATED BY ALLIES.

When a German is captured, he usually is glad. A soldier who relates his prison camp experiences in the March Farm and Fireside says: "The German who is fortunate enough to be captured by the Allies has really a pleasant time. He is sure of good, clean barracks, with a bed to sleep upon and sufficient blankets and food. But it is different in the German camps. There are no beds for us. We have to sleep on partitioned-off spaces on the floor.

Each barrack is divided into four rooms—two small ones at each end for those in charge, and two large rooms, forty by fifty. They are kept as clean as possible, but that is not saying much. The ground at Celle was all sand, which used to get into everything. A twig broom had been issued, but it was impossible to keep the place clean with this. There are no tables or chairs other than what the prisoners have made themselves. Shelves adorn the walls. These are filled with the boys' parcels."

Middle Aged Women

Are Here Told the Best Remedy for Their Troubles.

From "I was past my prime" period of life, I have been suffering from the symptoms of old age. I feel nervous, my blood is poor, and I am so tired that I cannot do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, and I am glad to say it has proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. Gordon, 935 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

CELEBRATE THEIR 65TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

(By International News Service.) Marion, Ill., April 11.—Mr. and Mrs. William J. Spiller, of this city, have just celebrated their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary. They have nine children. These, with forty-three members of two following generations, were present. Mr. Spiller is eighty-five years old and his wife is eighty-two.

MORE GERMAN VICES.

Clannishness and sentimentality—the futile looking backward to a happy state which never was—are prominent vices of the German. They existed before the German government began, some twenty or more years ago, to take a lively interest in her future in America. Germany recognized the existence of these vices and used them for her own purposes.—Rudolf Heinrichs, in Atlantic.

WHY HE ENLISTED.

Mrs. Flatbush—I suppose you miss your husband since he went to the war?

Mrs. Bensonhurst—Oh, me, yes! It's been so terribly quiet since he went away. Why, mother hasn't had a soul to fight with since he left.—Yonkers Statesman.

SIDEWALK SYMPHONIES.

"You seem entranced by the sound of your snow shovel."

"I am," replied Mr. Chuggina. "There's a particular shade of shriek when I push it over the bricks that appeals to my ear. I'd give anything if I could duplicate it in my auto horn."

HE LOSES TEMPER— HIS CAP—ARRESTED— THEN FINDS AUTO GONE.

(By International News Service.) Cleveland, Ohio, April 12.—Michael O'Byle was cranking his automobile when Patrolman Preuhs came along and to make conversation, asked him what he was doing. O'Byle had cranked long enough to have raged his temper and responded by throwing a package at Preuhs, who took him to the station for disorderly conduct. O'Byle paid bail and then went back to get the machine, only to find that some one had taken a hand in the argument and had stolen the car. And O'Byle, besides all this, had lost his cap, and he is now on trial for his failure to be pleasant with the "cop," when the latter tried to be friendly with him.

GIRLS BUY BONDS.

One hundred and seventy-eight girls employed at the American Cigar Company in Paducah subscribed $8,650 for Liberty Bonds of the third loan, at a rally meeting at the factory, Jefferson and Tenth streets. One of the most enthusiastic demonstrations of patriotism ever held in the city accompanied the bond buying.

VAMPIRES UNDER BAN.

(By International News Service.) Memphis, Tenn., April 11.—"Vampires" doesn't go any more at the Memphis depot where "Sammies" from the Park aviation field detrain when coming to the city. Special agents in plain clothes have been detailed to the depot to guard the soldiers from the "vampires." "The boys are here to learn to fight and not to flirt," said an official.

JUDGE UPHOLDS MAN'S RIGHT TO KISS WIFE.

(By International News Service.) San Francisco, April 12.—The Eastern judge who found a man guilty for kissing his wife when she did not wish to be kissed was all wrong.

Superior Judge Graham, known in San Francisco as "the great reconciler," has written this real "war" verse, which he calls "Take What's Yours."

"If with your wife you can't agree, Grab her, place her on your knee. Kiss her as she wildly squirms. Soon you'll find she'll come to terms. 'Be a cave man, seize your mate But if she shows you signs of hate; Let her scratch, let her bite, But kiss her, boy; it is your right.'"

FIND PREHISTORIC ANIMAL WITH 18-INCH TEETH.

(By International News Service.) Denver, Colo., April 12.—The bones of an monster prehistoric animal are being unearthed in the excavation for a building in the downtown district of Denver. The teeth found almost intact, are eighteen parts of the skull that have been uncovered show that the animal was several times as big as the largest elephant.

Shopping Made Easy.

No longer must the married man spend frenzied hours trying to match silks over the counters of the department stores. The government has decided that the sufferings of the silk-matching husband are just too horrible and is planning to alleviate them by standardization. Soon Henry will be able to order E-6785 and carry it home to Jane with the absolute certainty that there will be no come-back. The magic mechanism is the colorimeter, a device which is being perfected by the United States bureau of standards. The vibrations of light—which determine color—will be thrown onto one plane by the colorimeter and split up. Definite color standards so determined will be used in grading crude oil and paints as well as color fabrics.—Milestone.

SPENDS 202 DAYS IN JAIL BECAUSE OF LOOKS.

(By International News Service.) Indianapolis, Ind., April 11.—Just because he looks to be twenty-five, but in fact he is only twenty years old, Marion Cutrer, of Shreveport, La., has spent 202 days since June 1 last in jails on charges of being a draft dodger. Cutrer has just been released from his latest trouble after having been in the Marion County jail twenty days. He was first arrested in Fredonia, Kans., and held for 120 days, then he spent fifty-six days in another jail on similar charges. In each case he was able to prove he lacked one day of being twenty-one on registration day.

RACE OF WARRIORS.

Harrodsburg, Ky., April 10.—The Gaither family, of this city, has an unusual record for war service. Col. E. H. Gaither is a Spanish war veteran. His son, Capt. Edgar Gaither, is with an engineering corps. His daughter, Miss Elizabeth Gaither, will soon sail for France with a unit to do reconstruction work among the crippled soldiers. She is a graduate of Sargent's School of Physical Culture, Boston, and will scientifically teach the injured soldiers the normal use of their bodies and limbs. A daughter-in-law, Mrs. Morton Gaither, is a trained nurse. Four nephews are also lined up for Uncle Sam. They are Capt. G. F. Gaither, Lieut. Donald Gaither, Roscoe Gaither, in the signal service, and Sergt. Edgar Gaither Anderson.

The Road To Berlin—

He Is Building It

YARD by yard—mile by mile—this man, and millions like him—the best of America's young manhood—are building the road to Berlin—the road to VICTORY!

HE is going in with American pluck and American resourcefulness, but his sacrifice will be in vain unless you "carry on," unless you equip him to meet the Prussian on equal terms.

He gladly offers his life that America may live; that American homes may be safe forever from the terror of German arms.

Daily, hourly, he faces a thousand chances of death from the air, on the earth, and from the depths under the earth; from gas and mines and snipers' bullets; from bombs and shells and flying shrapnel.

We asked this man if he was down-hearted. He laughed at us: "As old General Grant would have said, 'We'll fight it out on these lines if it takes a DOZEN summers.'"

FOLLOWING THE FLAG.

Dr. Roscoe T. Jett has been tendered the position of veterinary meat inspector by the government at a salary of $1,500, to be assigned to duty in Chicago. The appointment came by wire yesterday and Dr. Jett has the matter under advisement. It would be a big sacrifice for him to accept, but he is inclined to respond to any call made upon him as a patriotic citizen.

A. A. Winfree, who volunteered for service in the mechanical department of the army, is now at Fort Thomas and expects to be sent either to San Francisco, Calif., or Washington, D. C., within the next week or two.

PRINCESS TODAY.

TACKLES WOLF, MOUNTAIN LION, AND RATTLESN IN DESERT ADVENTURES.

As Wealthy Mollycoddle Lost in Sage-Brush, Fairbanks Risks Life and Limb to Make Picture Realistic.

When Douglas Fairbanks began his film career with the production of "The Lamb," he had reason to believe from his past regular stage experience that he hurdled everything there was to be hurdled, boxed every one there was to be boxed, and accomplished all the other athletic stunts worth doing. From the very start he learned that there are a few things yet undone that he had to contend with. For example, in "The Lamb,"—and the screen shows a faithful record—he has to wrestle with a wolf, beat up a mountain lion and count the loose pieces on the tail of a rattlesnake.

PRINCESS MONDAY.

Ann Pennington's latest picture "Sunshine Nan," abounds in queer types of humanity which are portrayed by a clever cast, including Richard Barthelmess, Helen Tracey, John Hines, Charles Eldridge and others. There is, first of all, Sunshine Nan herself, skilfully depicted by Miss Pennington, next comes her loyal defender Dan Lewis, who grows up to be her admirer and later her husband; there is Mrs. Snawdor, portrayed by funny Mrs. Lewis McCord; her husband, a disreputable derelict of a man, which part is taken by Charles Giblyn and others as amusing. Alice Hegann Rice, the author, will be remembered for her "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," "Lovey Mary," "Mr. Opp," and others. Charles Giblyn is the director while Eve Unsell has been responsible for a good scenario, following closely Alice Hegann Rice's story, "Calvary Alley."
